

Hosted EPM 2010 Beta Demo Environments

Project Hosts is pleased to provide EPM partners with access to hosted EPM 2010 Beta environments to be used for demonstrations. These environments are not to be used to manage ongoing projects, but should only be used for partners to demo 2010 to customers.

There are three levels of environments with features and pricing described below. All of the levels have the following attributes:

- Demo environments are housed in a virtual Hyper-V environment
- They have Windows 2008, SQL Server 2008, SQL Reporting Services & Analysis Services, SharePoint Server 2010 Enterprise, Project Server 2010, Project Professional 2010, Office 2010, and Visio 2010
- Each virtual environment is limited to 50GB of storage (including apps and data)
- The environments come with one blank instance (no sample data) and 2 instances with Project Server 2007 sample data migrated into 2010
- You can specify at certain times to make a “gold” snapshot copy of the environment. The environment can be restored back to the state of this gold copy at future times. Certain levels may have more than one gold snapshot copy kept at any one time (see table below)
- In addition to the gold copies, one daily backup and one weekly backup of the server are kept at any time (on a different server in the data center).
- Each environment will be delivered with one user that is an admin for the virtual server and all applications on it; that user can provision other users up to the limits specified in the table below
- Each environment can be accessed via Remote Desktop with a maximum of two users logged in at any one time
- Environments with https access will also allow multiple users to access the environment over the web, browsing to PWA or connecting to Project Server from Project Professional running on a user’s local PC

The three levels of environments are outlined below
